A magical story
and coloring book

the time chamber

The red-haired fairy who lived inside the cuckoo clock was feeling restless. One day, while out in her rowboat, she began to daydream about the world outside of her beautiful time garden.

"What does the world outside of the clock look like?" she wondered.

The red-haired fairy decided to visit the little girl's room just outside the cuckoo clock. She would bring the girl magical and mysterious gifts that would turn her ordinary world into a fantastical playground.

She packed her finest treasures: a magic brush, keys to the time chamber and the golden clock tower, a time tape measure, a potion, a starlight candle, and a pair of opera glasses.

She also brought an owl-feather pen, a star-scented spray, a dancing fan, a starlight lantern, and a teleport mirror.

After the little girl went to bed,
the fairy stepped out of the door
and swung down the clock's chain.

The fairy discovered a land of treasures
beneath the little girl's bed.

Everything in the girl's world seemed so enormous and marvelous to the tiny fairy.

Whatever the fairy touched, no matter how mundane, turned into something beautiful and mysterious.

Through her opera glasses, the fairy saw . . .

Worn out from her explorations,
the fairy dropped off to sleep
without even realizing it.

Cuckoo, cuckoo . . . cuckoo.

When the morning chime of the cuckoo clock woke the little girl up, the fairy scurried into a hidden nook.

"Good-bye," the tiny fairy whispered.

Then she climbed back into the clock
and returned to the time garden, waiting for the day the girl would come and see her again.
